Transforming Leadership and Public Safety for Real-World Impact

Jason P. Armstrong is a retired police chief whose award-winning approach to leadership has made him a nationally recognized voice on reform, accountability, and organizational transformation. With over two decades of experience, he rose to national prominence as Chief of Police in Ferguson, Missouri, where he led industry leading reforms following the death of Michael Brown Jr. His community impact earned him induction into the National Law Enforcement Officer Hall of Fame.

Jason is the author of the Amazon #1 best-selling book I'm Done Here!: Create Lasting Impact by Leading with Intentionality, a powerful guide rooted in his real-world leadership journey. Jason speaks and consults globally with public safety agencies, corporations, and executive teams. His keynotes and workshops focus on intentional leadership, culture alignment, crisis navigation, and community trust-building empowering leaders to create measurable, positive change.
